33rd National Games Brings Athletes Together in Sport and Community

The 33rd National Games brought together national and international athletes with dwarfism for a weekend of sport, competition, and community across powerlifting, athletics, team sports, swimming, cycling, shooting, and new age curling.

The Games were about more than performance alone, focusing on coming together, building connections, and competing with pride in an inclusive and supportive environment

The event welcomes first-time competitors, bringing fresh energy and excitement to the weekend.

This year's Games once again highlighted the importance of inclusive sport and the value of providing opportunities for athletes with dwarfism to compete, connect, and celebrate their abilities on a national and international stage.
